Williamstown Arts Trip - June 23-25, 2000

Friday, June 23rd to Sunday, June 25th

Bus leaves the Club at 7:00 PM Friday & returns approx. 7:00 PM Sunday.

Complete Theater Festival Price is $295 per person inclusive.

Complete Film Festival Price is $300 per person inclusive.

Transportation and lodging is $230 per person inclusive.

See Reservation form on page 6 for pricing details.

For the third summer in a row, "The Village Beautiful" is beckoning a group of Williams Club travelers for an exclusive arts-filled weekend getaway. Two extraordinary festivals - the Williamstown Film Festival, now in its second year, and the Williamstown Theater Festival, well respected for the surfeit of talent that it brings to the Berkshires - will be occurring simultaneously on this last weekend in June and members will have the choice of attending their choice of events in either or both programs. The entire group will depart from New York City and enjoy gourmet boxed dinners on the trip, arriving at the Northside Motel late Friday night. Saturday will be filled with festival related events, and after a free morning on Sunday, the group will leave at 3:00 PM to arrive back at the Williams Club at approximately 7:00 PM.

Unlike previous years, members who attend the trip this year have three options:

- (1) Book either the Film Festival or Theater Festival packages
- (2) Create your own itinerary by choosing events from both the Theater and Film packages!
- (3) Do not book either festival package, but come up for the weekend and find your own entertainment.

Theater Festival On Saturday, June 24th, the Williamstown Theater Festival will offer two performances as part of its opening weekend celebration. At the 4:00 PM matinee Downstage show, members will see Orson's Shadow written by Austin Pendleton and directed by David Cromer. Inspired by a real event in theater history, Pendleton imagines the meeting of two living legends: Orson Welles and Laurence Olivier who are brought together by esteemed theater critic Kenneth Tynan to collaborate on the absurdist play Rhinoceros. Also with Joan Plowright and Vivien Leigh, Orson's Shadow is a funny and probing behind-the-scenes look at making art and living with celebrity. At 8:30 PM, on the Adams Memorial Theater Mainstage, members will see Tonight at 8:30, a presentation of three one-act plays by renowned playwright Noel Coward, directed by Michael Greif and Ann Reinking. Coward's witty one-acts are a theatrical box of bon-bons. An ensemble of WTF favorites are cast in shows that both mock and celebrate society and show business. A memorable theatrical event. The Williams Club group will have priority seating for both performances.

Film Festival This year's Williamstown Film Festival follows up on its successful inaugural in 1999 and holds to a similar schedule. Your day will start with an independent film screening at 10:00 AM and will be followed by a lunch seminar and discussion at 12:30 PM (last year the lunch discussion was led by director John Frankenheimer). There will be another major film screening at 2:30 PM. To complete your experience, the world-renowned Clark Art Institute will host a champagne and dessert reception at 8:00 PM, highlighted by a program celebrating independent film and touching upon the themes of the Film Festival. While the schedule of films on Saturday is still in its final planning stages, films likely to be seen at the festival are Anima, Origin of the Species, and Stranger in the Country.

Museums. In addition to both festivals, members may also take advantage of Williamstown's two excellent museums: The Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute and the Williams College Museum of Art (both are within walking distance of the motel). At WCMA this weekend you'll find, "Carrie May Weems: The Hampton Project," an exhibition featuring the work of two photographers, Frances B. Johnston and Carrie Mae Weems, joined by their discipline and shared focus on the history and legacy of Hampton University, founded in 1868 as an institution devoted to the education of African Americans and Native Americans. At the Clark you'll see, "Noble Dreams, Wicked Pleasures: Orientalism in America, 1870-1930," some ninety objects surveying the character and evolution of American representations of the "Orient," a term referring to the region that included Turkey, the Holy Land, Egypt, and North Africa in the popular imagination of turn of the century America. In North Adams, only a 10 minute cab or bus ride down Route 2, you'll find the new Massachusetts Museum of Contemporary Art (MASS MoCA). Explore the many installations in this 13-acre factory campus including Robert Rauschenberg's "The 1/4 Mile or 2 Furlong Piece," a vast project that constitutes a self-contained retrospective spanning the last 15 years. MASS MoCA also has sculptural works on view by American artists Carl Andre, Dan Flavin, and John Chamberlain.

Please Note: All prices are based on double occupancy. Single reservations may be available. Reservations are non-cancelable. Please reserve early if you are interested as bus and hotel space are extremely limited.

Professor of Psychology
Steve Fein on "Social Influence"

Monday, June 19th
Reception at 6:00 PM, Lecture at 6:30 PM
Price is gratis for members, $15 for guests.

One of the most important points in the field of social psychology concerns how profoundly we are affected by the situations around us - by our local and popular culture, by people near us, by the media, etc. A second fundamental point is that people tend to greatly underestimate the impact of these situational influences. Professor Fein will be discussing some of the ways in which we are affected by social influences. Some of the specific topics will include conformity to peers and obedience to authority, persuasive techniques used by salespeople and advertisers, political advertising and presidential debates, stereotyping and prejudice, and how Western and Eastern cultures differ in their conceptions of the self and its relation to others.

Steve Fein received his B.A. from Princeton University in 1986 and his Ph.D. in social psychology from the University of Michigan in 1991. He has been a professor of psychology at Williams College since 1991, where he has taught courses on Social Psychology; Stereotypes, Prejudice, and Discrimination; Experimentation and Statistics; Advanced Research in Social Psychology; Stereotypes in the Media; and sections of Introduction to Psychology and the department's Senior Seminar. Professor Fein also taught at Stanford University in the winter and spring quarters of 1999 as a visiting associate professor while on sabbatical from Williams. He has supervised dozens of independent study and senior honors thesis projects as well. His research interests are in stereotyping and prejudice, self-esteem, the effects of suspicion on perceptions of others, social influences in politics and sports, cross-cultural differences, and media influences on attitudes and behavior. He has published several articles on these various topics in a variety of psychology journals, co-edited four books, and is co-author of Social Psychology. Professor Fein serves on the executive committees of the Society of Personality and Social Psychology and the International Society of Self and Identity, and is a consulting editor of the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology.

MET Lectures

Fireworks: The Eighth Lively Art

Friday, June 16th at 6:00 PM

Price is $20.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art (Fifth Ave. at 82nd St.)

No form of entertainment involves so much ingenuity and expense for such a dazzling, but woefully ephemeral, effect as fireworks. Despite their fleeting nature - or, indeed, because of it - attempts have continually been made to record the visual appearance of fireworks displays. This exhibition includes over 100 prints and drawings, primarily from the Metropolitan's collection, illustrating fireworks celebrating births, weddings, military victories, national holidays, or technological triumphs such as the Brooklyn Bridge. The works - by Claude Lorrain, Francesco Piranesi, Winslow Homer, and Edgar Degas, among others - date from the 16th to the 20th century. George A. Plimpton, author and New York fireworks commissioner, delivers an illuminating talk on matters pyrotechnic, past and present.

This event is presented in conjunction with the exhibition "Fireworks."
